

Honoring The IAVARONE FAMILY

This year we honor the Iavarone family for their long-standing, consistent support of Help America Hear and giving the gift of hearing to many. The entire family shares a common bond of caring and a desire to offer assistance to those less fortunate. As the patriarchs of the family, Pat, John and Joseph embrace family values taught to them by their parents and pass these down to their children and grandchildren to teach and reinforce their family's values.

John Russell Thomas

Born at just 25 weeks, John and his twin sister Grace came in to our world three and a half months early. John was unresponsive and had to be revived, starting life in critical condition. He and his sister overcame hurdle after hurdle during their first six months in the hospital. They both proved to be fighters and eventually came home to their family. One hurdle that John couldn't overcome was his profound loss of hearing, initial tests showed a flat line response between his ears and brain. John was deaf.

After months of praying and banging pots near him, hoping that something would change... John suddenly began to respond to loud sounds. He was diagnosed with auditory neuropathy and moderate hearing loss. He eventually outgrew his auditory neuropathy, but he needed hearing aids and help to hear like other kids his age. He began to adapt and adjust, learning how to rely on little hearing aids to ensure he didn't miss the world going on around him.

Now at fifteen years old John is a thriving freshman attending Chaminade High School in Mineola, NY. Through elementary and middle school he served as class president, he achieved the principal's honor roll throughout middle school earning community recognition and the most prestigious scholastic awards. He has a passion for baseball, football, golf, boating and skiing. Strong bonds of friendship and enjoying family traditions are core values that John continues to grow from.

John knows the sheer importance of good hearing. "Help America Hear" introduced John's family to better medical care and top of the line hearing aids. John is now honored to help others live a better life with the gift of hearing. John would like our help to ensure that no child or adult misses out on the world around them.
